Who Are We?

The Bollard has always been owned, edited and published by Chris Busby, a former editor of Casco Bay Weekly and Bangor Daily News columnist who lives in Portland with his partner, Kiki Garfield. Kiki is our Advertising Director, as well as a contributing photographer. Art Director Nathan Galvez professionally designs every issue and many of the ads, and our team of regular contributors includes over a dozen journalists and illustrators with wide expertise and experiences. Busby, in partnership with the Maine Trust for Local News (our printer), distributes every issue and restocks high-traffic locations throughout the month.

Is The Bollard also online?

Yes! In addition to our paywall-free website, thebollard.com, we launched a Substack last year – at bollardhead.substack.com – to greatly expand our arts coverage and entertainment listings, and to post news scoops and gems from our 20-year archive between print editions. It's free to view and subscribe to our weekday Bollard Bulletins highlighting that day or weekend's coolest happenings and providing an easy-to-read guide to all the best music, theater, dance, visual art, sports, comedy, festivals and other events in our circulation area and beyond. Paid Substack subscribers also receive a PDF version of every issue three days before the print edition hits the streets, plus a variety of fun extras.

U&R
URBAN AND RURAL
real estate

ANCHORAGE PLACE, SOUTH PORTLAND, ME
349 FRONT STREET, FARMINGTON, ME

I have had the pleasure of working with U&R Real Estate since 2001. I come from a long line of real estate professionals, so when I discovered the company I realized it was the right fit. I am a bit of a perfectionist, and when I found the company I created my dream. I am grateful for the success and honored to have my wife, Linda Wheeler, designated Broker and Owner of U&R Real Estate.
